

Introducing the latest in aged care hygiene to meet demands for chemical-free cleaning

Distributor of aged care steam cleaning equipment, Duplex Cleaning Machines, has introduced its latest model of chemical-free cleaning equipment to the aged care sector.

Director of Duplex, Murray McDonald, says many aged care facilities now understand that the temperature and volume of steam produced when conducting touch point and regular cleaning is paramount in producing a deep clean.

"On the outside, the trend towards chemical free cleaning can be seen to be about environmental factors, however, the demand for steam is because of its superiority over chemicals to kill healthcare associated bacteria", Mr. McDonald said.

"With the rise of anti-biotic resistant superbugs, aged care facilities require a full infection control cleaning approach, and high temperature steam has been acknowledged by infection control Australian standards to be the most dependable, fast and economical method for the destruction of microbial life.

Evo used in aged care facility

"Our latest steam machine is called the "Evo" and it has 20 – 30 per cent more capacity than traditional steam cleaning machines in the amount of steam it can produce".

Benefits of the Evo include:

- Multi-purpose steam cleaning unit: Cleans all aged care touch points, bathrooms, kitchens, upholstery, tile and grout and more.
- No drying downtime: Due to its "dry" steam, it leaves surfaces dry within minutes.
- Connect and go water feature: Provides a continuous water supply. No refilling required.
- Fast, compact and OH&S friendly: It is compact and lightweight for easy storage and transportation, and replaces mops, buckets, chemicals, rags and manual scrubbing which can attribute to OH&S injuries for staff.

"Our aim with this latest model was to provide our aged care customers with a steam machine that can produce the highest temperature and steam volume possible to ensure infection control cleaning is done to the highest of standards."
